

A STORY FOR

Maya and the Secret Spark

Maya

The Moonlit Forest was quiet and blue. Maya tip-toed through the soft, silver grass to see the night magic.

Near a giant fern, Maya found a tiny firefly named Flicker. He was dark and quiet, hiding his light behind a leaf.

"Why are you hiding, little friend?" Maya asked softly. Flicker whispered that he was too shy to shine.

Flicker thought his light was too small for the big forest. He felt safe and cozy in the dark shadows.

Maya pointed to a tiny star high in the sky. "Even the smallest spark helps the moon guide the way," she said.

Maya held out her hand and hummed a gentle tune. Flicker felt a warm, brave flutter in his tummy.

Suddenly, pop! Flicker began to glow like a golden jewel. He zoomed into the air, painting the trees with light.

The forest was bright and happy, thanks to Maya and her brave friend. "Goodnight, Flicker," Maya whispered, her heart full of light.
